DEBATING TEAM AT WORK

Busily Preparing for Big Inter-Collegiate Event in April.

The University Debating Team has at last been selected and have now gotten down to hard work, preparing itself for the coming debate with Central for the inter-collegiate championship of the state.

Owing to a misunderstanding with Central's representatives on the Executive Committee of the Debating Association, there has been considerable delay, working greatly to our disadvantage, but from the energetic manner in which the boys are getting into harness, we have great hopes of their bringing the championship back where it rightly belongs.

Our debaters are W. C. Shultz, a Senior education student from Ohio county, J. F. Bruner, also a Senior in education, from Daviess county, and J. O. Gill, a Junior law student from Marion Crittenden county. None of the men have been members of the Inter-collegiate team before, but all are experienced public speakers, Mr. Shultz and Mr. Gill both having won previous oratorical and declamatory contests and Mr. Bruner being his class orator with quite an enviable record in his Literary Society. All three are industrious, capable students and we need feel no hesitancy in trusting the banner of the University in their hands. They are being coached by Professor J. T. Noe, one of the ablest and best equipped men in the state for such a task.

The debate is to be held here in the latter part of April. The subject is, "Resolved, That the Amendment to the Constitution of the United States proposed by the Sixty-first Congress and granting to the Federal Government the power to lay and collect an income tax according to the principle of uniformity, should be ratified by the states."

State, having the choice of sides, took the negative, and we confidently expect a clear demonstration or the inadvisability of the adoption of the amendment, "when Greek meets Greek" in the University chapel next month.—The Idea. University of Kentucky.

John Parr of Fredonia, one of the old land marks of that section was here last week as jolly as ever.

The Road Problem.

The local papers throughout the state are discussing the good road proposition from every angle imaginable. The road problem is being handled as successfully as it will ever be under the present system in Kentucky, and until it is entirely divorced from the county and fiscal court, except as to the furnishing of the funds necessary for the roads, there can be no improvement in the road working. The roads of a county ought to constitute a separate and distinct department of the local government, presided over by a single officer who has no other official duties. A county judge is not in a position officially to look after the roads as they should be. He can not leave his office to go about over the county investigating complaints. He appoints the best men it is possible to get to accept the position of overseers of roads, but it is impossible for him to ascertain by personal observation as to their success as such officials. A county supervisor of public highways, with the right man in the place, it appears, would be an improvement over the present system, as he could be and should be required to give the roads his individual attention, and then be held responsible for their proper maintenance.—Boone County Recorder.

SHADY GROVE MILLINERY

We have now all of our goods in. Latest fashions in Hats. Novelties from the best markets.

Mrs. B. C. Birchfield,
Shady Grove, Kentucky.

He was eighty-five years old, the last of his generation of the family so distinguished in the annals of the state.

Maj. Shelby was preceded to the grave many years by his wife, who was Miss Mary Steele, of Chicago. He is survived by eleven children—Mrs. Godfrey Darbshire, lately of England; Mrs. Shelby Sanders, of Louisiana; Mrs. P. M. McRoberts, of Stanford; Mrs. Will Lawmill, of Danville; Mrs. Kingsland Fisher, of St. Louis; Alfred Shelby, of Oklahoma, and Isaac Shelby, Jr., George Shelby and Misses Mary, Florence and Tevis Shelby, of this county.

In early life Maj. Shelby lived in Fayette county with his father and later went to Chicago, where he married. He enlisted in the Confederate army and rapidly rose in rank through distinguished service. For the past decade or so he had lived the quiet life of a country gentleman on part of Gov. Shelby's original homestead, "Travelers' Rest."

Somebody Head Him.

Herbert G. Whitney of Water Valley, Miss., has been keeping the wires hot since Saturday March 25th at 1:08 P. M. when the stork "lit" at his house with Miss Virginia Louise Whitney a beautiful little lady of eight pounds weight. He notified all his friends from President Markham, of the I. C. R. R. down, and is being congratulated on all sides. He thinks he is entitled to a raise in salary and a general promotion and we agree with him and think he will get it.

Woman of Seventy

Goes To College.

Spokane, Wash., Mar. 28.—Mrs. W. C. Price, seventy years of age, widow of a veteran of the Civil War, will be graduated with a class of young men and women in a local commercial college this spring, her diploma showing she is a competent stenographer and typist. She began her studies last September, attending school five days a week, and up to today she has been absent from only one session.

At the home of her son, Wray R. Price, 2018 Cleveland avenue, Mrs. Price said she will take up a homestead in Oregon after graduating and expects to open an office in a neighboring town, making a specialty of stenographic work and collecting to support her while acquiring 160 acres of land. Mrs. Price has been the second woman to register in Spokane when the ballot was given to the women of Washington. She is opposed to the tactics employed by the militant element in England and elsewhere, believing the method is wrong.

BACK TAXES PAID AS

A MORAL OBLIGATION

Heirs Of Rich Boston Man Make Good With City Treasury.

Boston, March 25.—Purely as a moral obligation and not on account of any legal liability, back taxes on the estate of the late Quincy A. Shaw, amounting to $492,000, on property overlooked by the assessors in 1908 and 1909 have been paid into the city treasury, according to a statement issued by the finance committee. The committee finds that the assessors were at fault in not exhausting all means of obtaining information regarding this taxable property, and that the city was unable to enforce collection in full.

The beneficiaries under the will of Mr. Shaw were asked to pay the amount as a moral obligation and they have not only done so in the case of the city of Boston, but have also paid to the city of Beverly, where Mr. Shaw had a summer residence, $70,000 in additional taxes, Shaw was Boston's heaviest individual taxpayer.

John C. Green of Salem, one of Livingstons most enterprising farmers was here last week.

MARION MAN

FOR GOVERNOR.

E. T. Franks Takes The Lead In Race For Nomination.

Owensboro, Ky., March 27.—E. T. Franks, of Owensboro, one of the best known and most popular among prominent Republicans of Kentucky is first in the field as a candidate for gubernatorial nomination of his party.

He came to Louisville yesterday and made his announcement late last night. Mr. Franks has been regarded as a probable candidate since the pot began to boil. His decision to offer himself followed the receipt of hundreds of letters from every section of the state urging him to take the step. Not a Congressional district was unrepresented in these communications, and the sentiment expressed was so enthusiastic that resistance seemed impossible.

Mr. Franks realizes that he will have probably strong rivalry for the nomination, and, in the event of success, a strenuous campaign against the Democratic choice, but he is ready for the contest, and his ability as a campaigner is well known.

Few men in the state are readier or more forceful on the stump. His following in Western Kentucky is powerful and loyal, and he enjoys the confidence and admiration of Republicans in general.

Ed Franks has many admirers and loyal friends in this county who would be proud to see him in the Governor's chair.—EDITOR.

Kentucky in Doubt Politically.

The 1910 census reveals a very significant fact concerning the political complexion of Kentucky. During the last ten years, the population of the state has increased 142,692. Fifty-one counties that gave Republican majorities in both 1907 and 1908, gained 127,204 while the sixty-eight Democratic counties gained only 15,488. Thirty-five Democratic counties lost in population while only eight Republican counties showed a decrease. The Republican counties have 24,554 greater total population than the Democratic counties. These figures indicate that Kentucky is in a doubtful state.—Warsaw Leader.

THE CLOD HOPPER AND THE BALD-HEADED MAN

A STIRRING TALE OF LOVE AND BUSINESS.

Written for the Record-Press by ROBERT C. HAYNES, Author of "This Funny World," "Dark Days and Bright," Etc.

I.

Joe Introduced.

A man once there was who of "hopping the clods"
Grew tired and became then a weilder of hods.
Joseph Turk was his name and there scarcely could be An all-around workman found better than he.

"I'm tired of the farm and of farming," said Turk;
"I prefer a new job and a new kind of work.
Almost any profession, I think, at all odds,
Would suit me much better than hopping the clods.

"I'm tired of the shovel, the rake and the hoe;
Of the ax and the pitchfork, the spade and the froe;
Of sowing and reaping; of steering the plow;
Of driving the mules and of milking the cow."

So Joe left the farm, for the city he hied,
And, joining a union, for work he applied.
"Could we give you a job? Yes, I think, Turk, we can:
For, to 'carry the hod' we are needing a man."

"That suits me exactly, and to it I'll stick!
To carry up ladders the mortar and brick,
When compar'd to clod-hopping, is playing," said Turk;
"For the man at the top, after all, does the work."

So the bargain was finish'd, and Joe went to work;
While the man at the top shouted, "Give us brick, Turk!"
"Ah! this is much better than turning the sod," Murmur'd Joe, greatly pleased, as he shoulder'd his hod.

II.

Joe Falls In Love.

Now Joe loved a maid—sweet, bright-eyed Imogene—
And an expert was she on the writing machine.
And so day after day—as such was the plan—
She was dictated to by a bald-headed man.

When the days work was over, however, and she
From the bald-headed man and dictation was free.
She thought it so nice—and perhaps it was so!—
To sit with and talk to and listen to Joe.

And Joe, when the man at the top ceased to work,
And cried, "Time is up! not another brick, Turk?"
Thought it was just splendid—and so 'twas, I ween!
To sit and converse with his sweet Imogene.

And so the time pass'd, and Miss Imogene Moss—
Still dictated to by her bald-headed boss—
At eight and at five, and the hours between,
Was pounding away on the writing machine.

And Joe, far remov'd from the turning of sod,
Continued his job—that of weilding the hod—
From morning till ev'ning, with scarcely a stop,
He carried the bricks to the man at the top.

And the bald-headed man—pretty Imogene's boss—
Mused, figuring over his profit and loss,
"What scoundrelly fellow will dare come between My bright-eyed expert and her writing machine?"

III.

The Bald Headed Man Forestalls Trouble.

The lights were turned on in the parlor when Joe,
One evening, walked out toward Middleton Row.
He had laid down his hod, for not once did he shirk,
Till the man at the top shouted, "Lay it down, Turk!"

Imogene in the parlor sat waiting for Joe—Impatiently waiting—why was he so slow?
While across in the store of her boss could be seen
The silent and grim-visaged writing machine.

Down the street walked Joe proudly and briskly, his mind
At peace with himself and the rest of mankind,
When a voice came in greeting: "Say Joe," it began,
"To what point are you steering?" 'Twas the bald-headed man.

"I am late, must get on, sir, as fast as I can:
I've no time to converse with a bald-headed man," Answered Joe, while the distance was less'ning between Himself and the home of his dear Imogene.

"The impudent clod-hopping scamp," mused the boss.
"If the rascal succeeds it will be to my loss;
I must therefore break up this affair, if I can—
And will do it, else I'm not a bald-headed man!"

"There's something a-brewing—a confab between My boss and my Joe!" laughed the fair Imogene;
"A social confab—will it be to my loss?"
"Twixt the clod-hopping Joe and the debt-hopping boss."

"I WANT MY DREAM AGAIN."

The little boy smiled in his sleep
that night,
As he wandered to Twilight Town;
And his face lit up with a heavenly light.

Through the shadows that drifted
down;
But he woke next morning with tear-stained eye

In the light of the gray dawn's gleam,
And out from the stillness he heard him cry,

"I've lost my dream—my dream."

And he told us then in his childish way,

Of the wonderful dream he'd known;

He had wandered away from the land
of play

To the distant land of the Grown;
He had won his share in the fame
and light

In the struggle and toil of men;
And he sobbed and sighed in the breaking light.

"I want my dream again."

As the years passed by the little boy grew

Till he came to the land of the Grown;

And the dream of his early youth came true.

The dream that he thought had flown;

Yet once again he smiled in his sleep—

When those near by might have heard him weep.

"I want my dream—my dream;"

For he dreamed of the yesterday of youth,

And the smile on a mother's face;
A hearth of old-time faith and truth
In the light of an old home place;

He had won his share of the fame
and light

In the struggle and toil of men—
Yet he sobbed and sighed in the breaking light.

"I want my dream again!"

Fox as a Gambler.

Charles James Fox, the English statesman, was even more notorious in the gaming world than he was famous in the world of politics. He had squandered $250,000 before coming of age. He became one of the most profligate gamblers of the vicious days in which he lived. Some of his finest displays in debate were sandwiched between excitement such as would unnerve most men who had no serious business on hand. Walpole has given a glimpse of a typical passage in this extraordinary man's life. He had to take part in the discussion on the thirty-nine articles in parliament on a certain Thursday. He had sat up playing hazard from Tuesday evening until 5 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon. An hour before he had recovered $50,000 that he had lost and by dinner time, which was 5 o'clock, ended losing $55,000.
On Thursday he spoke in the debate, went to dinner at past 11 at night; thence to a club, where he drank till 7 the next morning; thence to a gambling house, where he won $30,000, and between 3 and 4 in the

"McCADDEN'S DREAM."

(From Samuel Schwed, 400 E. 52nd St. N. Y. City.)

Wallace McCadden had been appointed vice-consul at Haw-wei on the Si-Kiang. How he managed to secure that position was more than he knew, for as traveling salesman for the products of Robert Hastings, Ltd., U. S. A., he had not been a shining success.

He had drummed Peking, Canton and Macao and had reached Hong-kong on his route, without cabling a single order home. He was stopping at the "American House" when this cablegram reached him:

"John Wellington called," it read. He turned to his code book.

"John," he translated, "Your services," "Wellington," "not wanted any longer," called, "return to San Francisco at once."

Well—McCadden did not return, for the Celtic blood in him would not acknowledge a defeat.

"Messrs. Robert Hastings, Ltd., can go to the Adamant Islands as far as I am concerned," he muttered angrily, as he tore the cablegram to pieces.

Rather heated language, you will admit, but Hong-kong is situated in a rather torrid zone of climate and activity.

He waited for weeks for something to turn up. Slowly his little stock of cash dwindled until his sole possessions were about twenty-five Mexican dollars, which—sum you know cannot carry you far in Hong-kong, but that never seemed to bother McCadden a wee bit, for he would always sing the jingle:

"Everything comes to him that waits, waits, waits."

In Hong-kong!

Wait—wait—wait.

"Gram for Melican gentlman," grinned the Chinese bell-hop, waiter and cook, at McCadden.

"Ah Sing, you're O. K. even if you are a slit-eyed walamongoose of a Celestial," replied the delighted McCadden, as he slipped Ah Sing a minor coin of the empire.

Ah Sing placed the coin in a slit behind an ear, an Oriental imitation of American money-madness (having money on the brain, or near it), grinned his thanks and closed the bamboo door from the outside.

Feverishly McCadden tore open the envelope of the cablegram.

"McCadden, Hong-kong, report to consul at Haw-wei on the Si-Kiang, for duty, at once." Signed "William T. Hayes," it read.

McCadden walked up and down the floor in perplexity. Having never had the pleasure of seeing Mr. William T., or had experience in things diplomatic, he could not recollect him.

It did not occur to him that a Wallace O. McCadden had arrived from the States only a day ago, on the P. & O. liner "Mongolian," and that the message was intended for that gentleman's vision instead of his own. Somebody had blundered!

"Everything comes to him that waits, waits, waits."

In Hong-kong!

So it's good to

Wait, wait, wait.

In Hong-kong! he jingled merrily as he packed his trunks.

Eight hours later found McCadden floating up the Si-Kiang river on board of a junk that was hiking it to Haw-wei as fast as the tide would allow.

McCadden being from St. Louis, U. S. A., the sight of the muddy water reminded him of the Missouri.

Not a breath of wind stirred the air and the heat became oppressive, something uncommon for a Missourian. He went into the shade of the cabin on the stern of the junk and reclining on a bale of jute he could hear the patter of the boatmen's slippers as they paced the deck.

The oarsmen, for the wind having died down, making it necessary to use the oars, and the ruddermen at the rudder, would now and then burst into a chant that sounded to McCadden like this:

"Yokohama-O-saka-Yokohama, Y! Peking Hakodate-Ma-pu-tan, Ho."

Evening was descending upon the town of Haw-wei as McCadden landed upon the bamboo pier that stretched out in the Si-Kiang at that point.

He had no more than stretched his legs upon terra-firma when he saw two coolies approach with a chair on their shoulders.

"Melican gentlman enter?" said one of the coolies, as he nodded toward the chair for McCadden to seat himself (200 lbs. avoidupois) in it.

Mentally McCadden thanked the consul for his foresight and accepted the invitation. The coolies again put the rods of the chair on their shoulders and walked up the winding main street, past the padogas.

In the distance he could see the American Consulate, lit up, and the moonlight shone upon "Old Glory" as it waved in the breeze, on the lawn in front of the consulate.

McCadden, intent on seeing the consulate, had not noticed the motley crew that gathered about him.

Bang! Something hit McCadden on the top of his head and he saw stars. The Celestials, that grinned at the foreign devil after they had tied his hands behind him and gagged him, would have done justice as models for the Imps of Perversity. They were Boxers! Now that they had the foreign devil on their hands they would take their toll. They dragged him into a vacant hut and tying him to a stake with leather thongs, squatted in silence around him.

"Drop! Drop! Drop!" the water splashed on McCadden's head from above.

"Drop! Drop! Drop!" drop after drop until it seemed to him as though he had undergone a century of torture. "Drop! Drop! Drop!" He tried to release himself from the stake. The more he tried the more the thongs would enter and cut into the flesh of his arms.

He gazed in mute appeal to the human devils in front of him, but as his agony became more and more apparent, they only nodded to each other in delight.

"Drop! Drop! Drop!" came from above.

McCadden shivered internally as the water flowed down his back. Drop! Drop! Drop!

Minutes turned to hours of torture and McCadden's mind wandered and he became unconscious as he saw a glimpse of khaki uniforms entering the doorway.

The rain came down in torrents and the wind whirling its way across the roof-tops dashed the raindrops pitter-patter against the window panes.

Wallace McCadden, junior member of the firm of Robert Hastings, Ltd., lay asleep reclining on a comfortable Davenport chair, and a library lamp shed its rays around.

On the table lay a book he had been reading before falling asleep, "The Late Boxer Troubles" by Charles Douglass, M. P., was the title and author's name.

McCadden opened his eyes and yawned. He roused himself to a sitting position and looked about him. There upon the library floor lay a porcelain Buddha broken to pieces.

He pressed a hand to his forehead and withdrawing it saw the water on it.

Gazing upward at the ceiling he saw the water dropping through. There was a "leak" in the roof.

"That was a nasty dream. No more reading of 'The Late Boxer Troubles' by myself," he exclaimed, as he placed the book on its shelf and rang for his housekeeper to remove the debris.

Dedication At Sturgis, Ky.

Sunday, March 19, was an ideal day for a church dedication, crystal clear, balmy, delightful. It seemed that God made his face to shine upon the congregation of the Presbyterian Church at Sturgis that day. It was an ideal occasion. The weather was all that could be desired, a splendid audience, delightful music, a soul-thrilling sermon, an offering more than asked for, the ceremony of dedication impressive. This church has had its severe struggles, but with all these it has had its victories. After the union of the Presbyterian and Cumberland Presbyterian churches this was the church made prominent in Kentucky as bearing the brunt of the lawsuit brought by the Cumberland Presbyterian church against the officers of this congregation for the church property. After the litigation was ended the Court of Appeals having decided in favor of the union, and the members had a little breathing spell, they decided that a new church was a necessity. The building was planned last June and the work began. It is a fine church plant, built of pressed brick, with beautiful art windows, lecture room, Sunday-school rooms, ladies parlor, folding chairs for the lecture room and little red chairs for the elementary department. It has an elegant auditorium, with tile floor in the main entrance, a lovely carpet which cost approximately $400., furnished by the Ladies Aid Society, a well arranged choir platform and a gem organ, pine-topped and pipe-toned. The auditorium seats about 450. It was tastefully decorated for the occasion with a profusion of superb flowers. The music was exquisitely rendered. The order of service was rich and impressive. The dedication sermon was preached by W. J. Darby, D. D., Evansville, Ind. He was at his best. His theme was "The Uplifting Church." It was indeed a grand presentation of the Son of God in the practical work of the church. Then came the offering. The officers of the church, asked for about $450.. Dr. Darby took the offering and in a short time secretaries announced $975. The members of the church were delighted at the result. The fund was then formally set apart to the worship of God in a beautiful service, the dedicatory prayer being offered by the Rev. Dr. Darby.

The Christian Endeavor Society had a splendid rally at 6:30. The statement was made that in two years and two weeks, the time since the organization of the Society, it has grown from eighteen to seventy-two, from one praying member to a score or more. But that the best results were not to be calculated in outward show, but were realized in the lives, experience and Christian development of its members. A nice memento was presented to Mrs. Hurst, whom they style their "Christian Endeavor Mother."

At 7:30 the building was again filled with an appreciative audience. Another inspiring service closed the exercises for the day.

This church was never in a more prosperous condition than to day. It has an official board that for business capacity, devotion to the church and spiritual enthusiasm is scarcely equalled. It is well organized in its various departments, having a live Sunday-school and most of the societies that you will find inherent in a small church. There is love, harmony and good will among all its members. The pastor, Mr. Hurst and his wife, have done a splendid work here. It is with the kindest feelings between pastor and people and the best wishes for each other that the present pastor leaves this work and goes to another field. Rev. J. F. Claycomb, Pontoon, Ill., the pastor-elect will be on the field April 1st. With an energetic pastor and a responsive people and co-operative people, the future of this church is radiant with hope.

Kentucky May Lose Portion

Of Government Fund.

Washington, March 21.—Kentucky is in danger of losing its share of the $11,000,000 authorized by congress at the recent session to purchase an Appalachian forest reserve. Unless the Kentucky legislature meets in special session and passes a law enabling the federal government to hold land in Kentucky, citizens of the Bluegrass state will not get their share of the vast sum of money congress has authorized poured into the states that have land within the contemplated reserve.

Kentucky, it has just been discovered, is the only one of these states that has not passed a law permitting the federal government to hold land within the state. It is an odd situation, and one that calls for the early attention of Governor Wilsons.

PRINCESSES AT CORONATION.

Daughters of Powerful Rulers to See George Crowned.

Among the royal throng that will be present at the coronation of King George V. next summer will be three princesses whose fathers are leaders among the great rulers of the earth. One is the Princess Victoria Alexandra, the only daughter of England's ruler, who is now fourteen years of age; consequently the ceremony will be of greater interest to her than to Princess Olga of Russia or Princess Victoria Louise of Germany.

The eldest daughter of the czar is now sixteen, while the kaiser's youngest girl is nineteen. All three are considered good looking and with traits of amiability to match their beauty.

It is rumored in Europe that both the Russian and German princesses are about to be engaged and that the coronation may be made the occasion for the announcements.

RIDE OF LADY GODIVA.

The ride of Lady Godiva, around which so much romance has been centered and into which so much fiction has been injected, is the most picturesque of all rides, even in its unadorned telling. This ancient legend is celebrated in the annals of the city of Coventry in Warwickshire, England.

Godiva was the wife of Leofric, earl of Chester, in the middle of the 11th century. She was wondrously beautiful and as good as she was fair. Her piety and benevolence caused her name to be blessed in the church, and endeared her to the poor people. And the wickedness of the earl, her husband, caused the virtue of the saintly lady to shine the brighter by contrast.

There came a time, under Leofric's rule, when the people of Coventry groaned under the heavy taxes which the cruel lord imposed, and Lady Godiva interceded in their behalf. She begged and pleaded with her husband to relieve Coventry of the burdensome toll. He was obdurate, but at last gave mocking consent to grant the petition—with this infamous proviso: That the lady was to ride uncovered through the streets on horseback in the broad light of noonday.

Lady Godiva accepted this shameful condition, and, having publicly proclaimed her purpose, asked all the townspeople to close their shutter and remain within doors while she fulfilled her vow for mercy's sake.

The story of Lady Godiva's ride—periodically celebrated in Coventry with festival and pageant up to within a recent period is best told in the familiar lines of Tennyson:

"Then she rode forth, clothed on with chastity."

The deep air listen'd round her as she rode.

And all the low wind lightly breathed for fear,

The little wide-mouth'd heads upon the spout

Had cunning eyes to see the barking cur

Made her cheek flame; her palfrey's football shot

Light horrors thro' her pulses; the blind walls

Were full of chinks and holes; and overhead

Fantastic gables, crowning, stared; but she

Not less thro' all bore up, till, last she saw

The white-flower'd elder-thicket from the white field

Gleam through the gothic archway in the wall

Then she rode back, clothed on with chastity."

Other poets and prose writers have discoursed on his side, and Mascagni, the Italian composer, but recently finished an opera on the subject, which he has called "Ysobel."

The simplest, and apparently the oldest, form of narrative is given by Roger of Wendover. It is he who quotes Leofric as saying: "Mount your horse naked, and pass through the market of the villa, from one end to the other, when the people are assembled, and on your return you shall obtain what you ask."

"Accordingly," he says, "Godiva, attended by two soldiers, rode through the market place, her long hair down, so that no one saw her. Leofric, struck with admiration, granted the release of the "villa" toll.

The chronicle ascribed to John Brompton, of the late 14th century, gives a briefer account, omits the escort, and the market, and asserts without qualification, that no one saw her.

The celebration of this ride by the people of Coventry was begun on May 31, 1678, upon which occasion a young man represented Lady Godiva. The original procession was official. Leofric died on August 31, 1057. How long Godiva survived him is not known. A rosary of gems, worth 10 marks of silver, she left to be placed around the neck of the image of the Virgin in the abbey church at Coventry. In one of its two porches she was buried, her husband lying in the other.

Suppose some of our average men and women, but there is no reason why the average itself should not be higher. That can be brought about not by genius, but by training before one a higher ideal and then striving earnestly and intelligently to reach that ideal. Even if the goal is not quite reached the honest effort put forth will have its refining and strengthening effect, not only on the one making the effort but on all who come in contact with that ambitious person.

Congressman James, hale, hearty and prosperous looking, dropped in home Monday and spent the day. He is feeling in fine spirits as to his race for U. S. Senator to succeed Senator Paynter. Where Is Our Dupont?

Has Crittenden County no "Colie" Dupont within her borders? We note in our eastern exchanges where "T. Coleman Dupont, president of the Dupont Powder Co., of Wilmington, Delaware, will build at his own expense, a boulevard 200 feet wide to extend from the northern to the southern limits of the state, a distance on an air line, as the road is to be run, of 103 miles at a cost of $2,000,000.00. To our mind no grander project has ever been conceived for the best interest of the commonwealth thus served. Not even a railroad with its bands of steel is of as much benefit as such a great roadway will be, and when built as proposed how easy and at what small cost, can collateral lines be extended from the remotest point in the state to connect with the outside world. There is no greater civilization than good roads. They enable the people to get about, see each other, market their products and enjoy life.

Suppose some of our capitalists who are piling up their money for their heirs to scrap over, were to put it in circulation during their lives for instance, in building a turnpike from Livingston Creek to Fords Ferry, from Shady Grove to Salem, from Rodney to Dyersburg and from Piney Fork to Tolu. These four could soon be added to, with branches, to reach those sections not touched by the main lines. If each pike centered at Marion the above lines would not exceed 103 miles which one man offers to build for his native state and if ours were built 20 feet wide, the above mentioned lines could be built, turn-piked and metalled for $100,000.00 and when completed would add one million dollars to the value of our county.

Have we not 100 men in Crittenden County who will give $1,000.00 each to this enterprise. Could a more enduring monument be built to any man than to put on the first mile stone this inscription, "this mile of high-way was built and donated to his native county by

Don't all speak at once, give Henry Bros., time to make the mile stones. It may be that some of our readers do not know that the Dupont referred to, got his first training in Western Ky., and is personally known to many of us. For many years he had charge of the Central C & I Co., business at Central City, Hamilton, Guylena, Mercer, McHenry and other mining properties which the Duponts own, and no doubt his big-heartedness which in part is natural was increased by his stay on the soil of old Kentucky. Twenty-five years ago we remember when he brought his bride from the East and lived in the home he had built for her in Central City. His conception of Dupont Boulevard proves that he is one of the broadest minded men of the age, and will write his name high on fames escutcheon.

Mail Carrier Robbed James Thomas Relieved of $1000, in Silver.

Monday morning, Marion and the vicinity here about was created to a genuine sensation in the way of high-way robbery like unto those we have all read about which occur so frequently in the wild and wooly west. The scene was on the Salem and Marion mail route about 8 miles west of Marion and near the Union Baptist Church. James Thomas the mail carrier was in his back alone and the team was jogging along as usual when at a deep cut, in the road which has woods on each side, two men sprang from the left hand side of the road and leveling double barrelled shot guns at his head demanded the money he had. Thomas at first demurred to this treatment and denied having any money but they claimed to know better and demanded that he unload, which he did promptly. While one of the bandits guarded him the other searched for the package containing the money and when he found it they directed Thomas to drive on and not look back on penalty of being exterminated. Thomas obeyed implicitly, not stopping, until several houses had been passed, to telephone the news of the hold-up to Sheriff Pickens. The robbers wore common, store 'false-faces and white cotton work gloves thus preventing Thomas from knowing whether the bandits were white or colored. Thomas proceeded to Salem with the mail and returned here in the afternoon at five o'clock. As soon as the robbery was reported here City Marshall, Cannan, telegraphed for bloodhounds and the Chief of Police and deputy jailer of Morganfield arrived with their famous dog King on the four o'clock train where carriages were waiting to convey them to the scene. They were accompanied by a large crowd from here many of whom went armed to the teeth to capture the bold high-waymen. They reached the scene long before dark, but the dog refused to take any trail and after repeated efforts he was returned to Morganfield Tuesday morning.

The money in question was $1,000 delivered to Thomas by the American Express Company at Marion for the Salem Bank. It came here by express, Saturday, but Mr. Venner refused to accept it and the route agent returned it here Monday morning in time for delivery to Thomas, who departed with a big cargo about 8:30 a. m. His trip was uneventful until about 10 o'clock when he was confronted with the four shining barrels, to which he surrendered.

Revival At Salem.

Rev. S. M. Baile, Pastor M. E. Church South, closed a successful revival at Salem Union Church, Saturday night, March 19th. The meeting continued for twelve days and a good interest was manifested by both the christians and the irreligious.
Rev. E. Watt Smith of Smithland, did the preaching to the delight and edification of all who heard him. Bro. Smith is an earnest, forceful preacher and made many friends while here.
All denominations attended these meetings and took part in the services. There were eight professions and nine additions to the church.
May the revival spirit here and elsewhere continue to grow and may it spread from ocean to ocean and from shore to shore till all are brought to a knowledge of the truth as it is in Christ.

All the grasping and the greed of this world come from not regarding our fellows as our neigh-

do away with the idea of classes.
There isn't any justification for class lines in America. They are unjust, unwholesome, unrighteous and un-American.
Why should we have class lines
here in this country and one man despise another just because he has been lucky enough to make has some right to be proud of what he makes with his own hasn't any business putting on

In The Land of Flowers,

Upland, Cal., Mar. 18, 1911.
Mr. S. M. Jenkins.

Marion, Ky.

My dear friend Jenkins: I wish you would say to your many readers of the Record-Press, that we made the trip in good shape. While we passed hills, mountains, valleys, plains and many, many miles of desert, we rolled into the beautiful little city of Upland Friday morning at 7:45. We were met at the station by our old friend Ramsey and daughter and his father-in-law, Bro. Bennett. We were soon in the parsonage with our feet under the table and what we did for breakfast and other good things, was a plenty.

The parsonage is located on one side of a two acre lot, the whole of the lot except where the house and little barn sits, is covered in orange trees and most of them are hanging full of oranges. We had not been there thirty minutes until William and Eva were under a nice tree with both hands full of the finest oranges you ever put your two eyes on. I can't tell just when they are going to get full, they began yesterday and are still eating. I am sitting here in my room writing, with the door open toward the north;
looking up I can see the beautiful oranges, grape fruit and flowers and every thing looks like mid summer, then raising my head I can see the mountain with its lofty head all covered in snow. So you see its summer in the valley and winter on the mountain.

Upland is just forty miles from Los Angeles in the Pomona valley. We will be here two weeks then go to Pasadena and from there to Los Angeles and on as long as we can stay. We are well pleased with this country. Dr. Fowler, of Boston, Mass., is doing the preaching, he is a very fine preacher. We had our first service last night and the large house was well filled.
Everything points to a great meeting.

Blessings upon all my friends ever and always your friend and Brother.
W. B. YATES.

Highest Farm Wages Paid
In Forty-five Years.

Higher wages were paid to American farm laborers during 1910 than at any time in the last forty-five years according to statistics just made public by the Department of Agriculture. The average wage for the country was $27.50 per month during 1910, while twenty years ago it was only $18.33. With board, the average wage was $19.21.
In some parts of the country
the rate of wages of farm laborers was higher than in others.
The highest was in Nevada, where the rate was $54.00 while in Montana and Washington it was $50.00, South Carolina paid the lowest rate, $16.50 per month.—Warsaw Leader.

A Helpless Invalid

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

A woman who is sick and suffering, and won't at least try a medicine which has the record of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, is, it would almost seem, to blame for her own wretchedness. Read what this woman says:

Richmond, Mo. — "When my second daughter was eighteen months old I was pronounced a hopeless invalid by specialists. I had a constitution of doctors and they said I had a severe case of ulceration. I was in bed for ten weeks, had sinking spells, and was pronounced to be in a dangerous condition. My father insisted that we try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and brought me six bottles. I soon began to improve, and before it had all been taken I was as well and strong as ever. — my friends hardly recognized me so great was the change." — Mrs. Woodson Branstetter, Richmond, Mo.

There are literally hundreds of thousands of women in the United States who have been benefited by this famous old remedy, which was produced from roots and herbs over thirty years ago by a woman to relieve woman's suffering.

Read what another woman says:—

Jonesboro, Texas. — "I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for myself and daughter, and consider it unequalled for all female diseases. I would not be without it for anything. I wish every mother in America could be persuaded to use it as there would be less suffering among our sex then. I am always glad to speak a word of praise for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and you are at liberty to use this testimonial." — Mrs. James T. Lawrence, Jonesboro, Texas.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, is it not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering from the same trouble?

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

If the slightest trouble appears which you do not understand, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for her advice—it is free and always helpful.

Hard Time Getting Sleep.
A terrible demonstration of New York hotels has been made by a traveler, by name Oswald Flannagan, owner of a hotel store in Kokomo, Ind. Flannagan complains bitterly because he could get no rest. This was not because he frequented Broadway, rather through the short-sightedness of the hotel men in failing to furnish beds for tall men. Flannagan, who is more than six feet in height, most of which is legs.
"Proprietors who take money from tall travelers should be prepared to accommodate them properly," quoth Flannagan to one hotel clerk. "All the beds I tried average about five feet, and that left a lot of me hanging over. I put my feet through the brass rungs, and every time I got to sleep I dreamed I was sitting down."
"You're supposed to curl up in a New York bed," suggested the clerk. "Space is very valuable in this city."

Reversed the Proposition
Robert W. Woolley, the writer, found it necessary not long ago to take a trip west. On the dining car of the train he saw that he had in his pocket 10 cents in change, his smallest bank note being one for $50. He handed this to the porter, who went to the end of the car for a conference with the conductor.
"I'm very sorry about this," said the conductor, standing in front of Woolley and tugging with the big bill, "but we haven't the change for $50. We'll just take your address and send you the change."
Woolley calmly reached over and took possession of the banknote. "You've got nothing on me," he said. "I'll take the address of the railroad and send the price of the meal." — Chicago Record-Herald.

OBITUARY.

Samuel Collin Bennett, died of chronic diarrhea at his home in Fredonia, Ky., Feb. 20th, 1911, in the sixty-fifth year of his age. He lived and died in a few miles of the place of his birth and here he spent his whole life except some a few months during the war. So the writer feels in penning these few words he is not introducing a stranger to the public for few men in all the country was better known.

It was known too, by all, that in him were centered many traits of character that are essential to noblest manhood. He was thoroughly sincere and perfectly frank. He was positive in character, always taking his stand for or against a measure, but always standing, as he believed, on the right side.

He was a plain honest man, large hearted, given to hospitality, his house was always opened and rare was the time when it was not full. He loved his kin and kind. What he possessed was shared freely with them. His friends were many and to them he was faithful and true. Many a tired and discouraged minister of the Baptist church found his home a haven of rest and not a few of them retained vivid recollections of his liberality.

He was truly a success in life, his business ability was of a high order and his courage was of that kind which never shrinks. Few men indeed could take the farm where he raised his family and make the success he did. Then in the evening of his life when he could no longer cultivate his land, he sold out and entered the mercantile field, where his trade grew and stock enlarged until the last hours of his life. In his strong young manhood, he professed religion and united with Caldwell Spring church, and after a few years was elected one of their deacons in which position to the close of his life he "adorned the doctrines of Christ his Savior."

In his twenty-fourth year, he was united in marriage to Miss Bettie Boaz. To this union there was born three children, one of which died in infancy, two remain, W. T. Bennett, of Louisiana, and Ira C. Bennett, of Fredonia, Ky.

When at last informed by his physician that he could not live much longer, he went to making preparation, "to set his house in order." This he did with the same care, from a business standpoint that had characterized him in all his business relations. After he was done he said to friends, "I am now ready to go, ready to stay, the Lord's will be done."

As the last night he lived drew on, he was perfectly conscious it was his last night, he said to his family, "I won't take any more medicine, it might keep me a few hours with you all but you know how I suffer, let me go, then he thought of his little grand son, who was to him as dear as his own life. "Put him carefully to bed don't let him know what transpires here tonight, he will know all in the morning."

Then with perfect unflinching trust he resigned himself into his Father's hand, feeling that all was well. Just as the clock struck two that night like a tired child he sank to rest with fair visions of the beyond.

He is now forever free from the sorrow of earth. He has indeed triumphed, and to those who stand on this side of the brink and look and long and weep, I would mention the mercy seat.

J. S. HENRY.

On the account of not being prepared to take care of the large amount of eggs that I am now getting from my poultry which is about twelve hundred to fifteen hundred eggs monthly, and I am only prepared to take care of five hundred every twenty one days, in my incubators, so, I concluded to offer these eggs from High Class Birds, to parties near home rather than to advertise them in papers out of my own State at a remarkably low price of seventy-five cents per setting of fifteen, delivered at the following places in Crittenden and Livingston counties.

MARION, TOLU, SHERIDAN, SHADY GROVE, SALEM, CARRSVILLE, SMITHLAND, PINKNEYVILLE, LOLA AND HAMPTON.

The above price is hardly one half of what these eggs would cost you should you purchase them from poultry people in other states who have the full blood, and if I was prepared to take care of them all, not a penny less than one dollar and twenty-five cents would buy them. I would be pleased to have any one call and investigate my stock, if they so desire to see for themselves whether I have what I claim in this line or not. Write or Call.

AUSTRIAN HEIR IN A RAGE.

Denial of Precedence For Morganatic Wife Causes Furor.

A royal row is reported from Vienna between the venerable Emperor Francis Joseph and his son and heir, Archduke Francis Ferdinand, which, it is predicted, will cause great trouble in the court of Austria before it is adjusted. The cause of the trouble is the archduke's morganatic wife, Duchess Sophie of Hohenberg, and her claims to precedence. As a result of the affair the archduke and his wife absented themselves from the first court ball of the season. It is known that the archduke had a stormy interview with his father the morning of the ball, demanding that his wife be accorded precedence over all the archduchesses. This was peremptorily refused, and the heir to the throne left in a fury and at home found his wife putting the finishing touches to her court gown. The news caused tears, of course.

CHAPTER VII.

TWO ON THE VERANDA.

ROSS turned to Virginia, leaving the political discussion to go on over his head. "I was back in the old island a couple of years ago, and you've no idea how small it seemed to me. It surely is a 'right little, tight little island.' I couldn't help wondering whether the men in parliament were as important as they seemed to think they were and whether England is not really an empty shell of empire, a memory of what it once was. I couldn't settle down there some way. I was homesick for the mountains in a month. But what seemed me most was the pauper population of the old place—one in every thirty-seven must be helped. I came back to the States gladly. I guess I'm an American," I said to my sisters.

To Lee Virginia the talk of "the curse of democracy" and "the decay of empire" was unexciting, but when Cavanagh told of the sheepmen's advance across the dead line on Deer creek and of the threats of the cattle owners she was better able to follow the discussion. Bridges was heartily on the side of law and order, for he wished to boom the state being a heavy owner in a town site, but he objected to Redfield's ideas of "letting up the resources of the state."

"But we're not," retorted Redfield; "we're merely defending them against those who would monopolize them. We believe in their fullest use, but we see no reason for giving away the resources when the country needs the revenue."

Mrs. Redfield rose as soon as the coffee came on. "You gentlemen seem bent upon discussing matters of no interest to us," she said. "So we'll leave you to fight it out alone. I'm sure you'll all agree with Hugh in the end. Like General Grant, he's a very obstinate man."

No sooner were they seated in the big living room than Mrs. Enderby began to relate comical stories of her household. Her cats had bit and run up the wall. Her dogs were forever getting quilled by reason of foolish attacks upon porcupines, or else they came home so reminiscent of skunks that they all but smothered the cook.

"Unusually they return from encounters of this kind just as we are sitting at dinner," she explained. "Further more, Enderby's ditches are habitually getting clogged and overflowing the lawn and filling the cellar, and he stands in terror of his cowboys. When I think of all these interruptions and distractions England's order and routine seem heavenly. But Charley finds all this amusing, more's the pity, and leaves me to set things in order. Most ludicrous of all to me is his habitual claim that the ranch is paying. I tell him there's an error in his bookkeeping somewhere, but he assures me that his receipts exceed his expenditures last year, which is quite too incredible. You've no idea how high wages are and how little we make."

"Oh, yes, I have," laughed Mrs. Redfield. "And my cat had a fit too. Hugh says it's the high altitude. I tell him it's melancholia."

Cavanagh showed himself. "I hear so much laughter I'm coming in. We're all so luxuriously political out here, and, besides, I came to see the ladies, and I can stay only a few minutes longer."

"You're not going back tonight?" exclaimed his hostess.

"I must be on my own precinct by daylight," he replied. "The supervisor has an eye on me."

Mrs. Redfield explained to Lee Virginia, "He rode fifty miles over the mountains."

"Thirty," corrected Ross. "But what does that matter when I'm in the company of such charming ladies?" he added gallantly.

"And now he's going to ride all the way back tonight?" gasped Mrs. Enderby.

"And no moon!"

"How can you find your way?" asked Mrs. Bridges, to whom this was a mortally dangerous journey.

"Oh, it's quite simple! If you don't bump against a tree or fall into the creek you may be quite sure you're on the trail," laughed Ross.

Mrs. Redfield knew the true reason for his coming and was not at all pleased. "For with all Lee's personal charm," she said to her husband, "she is socially beneath Ross Cavanagh even in a state where social barriers are few."

"Come out on the veranda," suggested Cavanagh, "and I'll show you the hills I must climb."

Lee accepted innocently, but as the young people left the room Mrs. Enderby looked at her hostess with significant glance. "There's the lady Ross rode down to meet. Who is she?"

This amusing about every four years is plain rot. Here's Ross! He gets in the midst of a lot of the finest kind of reforms, you know, and directly you go and turn him out. Then if you get a bad man you've to wait four years till you can fetch him a whack. Why not arrange it so you can pitch your president out the minute he goes wrong? I say your old rag of a constitution is a ball and chain on your national leg. England is immeasurably better off so far as that goes."

Ross turned to Virginia, leaving the political discussion to go on over his head. "I was back in the old island a couple of years ago, and you've no idea how small it seemed to me. It surely is a 'right little, tight little island.' I couldn't help wondering whether the men in parliament were as important as they seemed to think they were and whether England is not really an empty shell of empire, a memory of what it once was. I couldn't settle down there some way. I was homesick for the mountains in a month. But what seemed me most was the pauper population of the old place—one in every thirty-seven must be helped. I came back to the States gladly. I guess I'm an American," I said to my sisters.

To Lee Virginia the talk of "the curse of democracy" and "the decay of empire" was unexciting, but when Cavanagh told of the sheepmen's advance across the dead line on Deer creek and of the threats of the cattle owners she was better able to follow the discussion. Bridges was heartily on the side of law and order, for he wished to boom the state being a heavy owner in a town site, but he objected to Redfield's ideas of "letting up the resources of the state."

"But we're not," retorted Redfield; "we're merely defending them against those who would monopolize them. We believe in their fullest use, but we see no reason for giving away the resources when the country needs the revenue."

Mrs. Redfield rose as soon as the coffee came on. "You gentlemen seem bent upon discussing matters of no interest to us," she said. "So we'll leave you to fight it out alone. I'm sure you'll all agree with Hugh in the end. Like General Grant, he's a very obstinate man."

No sooner were they seated in the big living room than Mrs. Enderby began to relate comical stories of her household. Her cats had bit and run up the wall. Her dogs were forever getting quilled by reason of foolish attacks upon porcupines, or else they came home so reminiscent of skunks that they all but smothered the cook.

"Unusually they return from encounters of this kind just as we are sitting at dinner," she explained. "Further more, Enderby's ditches are habitually getting clogged and overflowing the lawn and filling the cellar, and he stands in terror of his cowboys. When I think of all these interruptions and distractions England's order and routine seem heavenly. But Charley finds all this amusing, more's the pity, and leaves me to set things in order. Most ludicrous of all to me is his habitual claim that the ranch is paying. I tell him there's an error in his bookkeeping somewhere, but he assures me that his receipts exceed his expenditures last year, which is quite too incredible. You've no idea how high wages are and how little we make."

"Oh, yes, I have," laughed Mrs. Redfield. "And my cat had a fit too. Hugh says it's the high altitude. I tell him it's melancholia."

Cavanagh showed himself. "I hear so much laughter I'm coming in. We're all so luxuriously political out here, and, besides, I came to see the ladies, and I can stay only a few minutes longer."

"You're not going back tonight?" exclaimed his hostess.

"I must be on my own precinct by daylight," he replied. "The supervisor has an eye on me."

Mrs. Redfield explained to Lee Virginia, "He rode fifty miles over the mountains."

"Thirty," corrected Ross. "But what does that matter when I'm in the company of such charming ladies?" he added gallantly.

"And now he's going to ride all the way back tonight?" gasped Mrs. Enderby.

"And no moon!"

The ladies, of this vicinity, have pieced a quilt and are going to quilt it and put it up for sale. The proceeds to be used for the building of the church at this place.

In the absence of our pastor Sunday, we had prayer meeting on that day.

Saint Griffith invited his neighbors to his home last Thursday and had an old fashion new ground clearing for the gentlemen and a quilting for the ladies. Those present, did Mr. Griffith a good day's work for which he wishes to express his thanks.

Aunt Sallie Boaz and Miss Alice Crouch have returned to their old home after an absence of three months with their friends and relatives.

Say, how was March 15th, for a windy day?

Charles Holomon has a earlunkle on his neck and it is giving him lots of trouble.

Several from this place went to Marion Friday.

The bible says "how shall we escape if we neglect so great a salvation."

Linvelt Holomon is still confined to his room.

Some men seem to think they have nothing to do in this life but to sit idly by and let some one else do their part of the work for them. But the bible says that every man shall give an account of himself to God. And we fear that many will not be able to render much account for the way they have discharged their duty toward the church building here. Many have done nothing others have not worked enough to get weary. But the promise is to the faithful. And so our church is moving on just the same.

Free Sample Aids Old Men

The sudden change from years of activity to a body and mind to the quiet of later years causes the human system to undergo many changes, chief of which is in the digestive organs.

It becomes harder and harder to get the bowels to move promptly and regularly and in consequence many elderly men suffer not only from the back trouble, constipation, but from indigestion, headache, belching, sour stomach, drowsiness after eating and similar annoyances. It is first of all necessary to keep the bowels open and then to tone the digestive muscles so as to get them to again do their work naturally. A violent cathartic or purgative is not only unnecessary but harmful, and something mild will do the work just as well.

After you have got through experimenting with salts and pills and waters of various kinds, and have become convinced that they do only temporary good at best, then try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a mild, gentle, pleasant-tasting laxative tonic that is especially adapted to the requirements of old people, women and children, and it is effective enough for anybody. Your druggist who has handled it successfully for a quarter of a century, will sell you a bottle for fifty cents or one dollar, but if you want to make a test of it before spending any money send your name and address to Dr. Caldwell and he will mail you a sample bottle free of charge.

This remedy is rapidly disappearing from the forms of medication for the cure of stomach, liver and bowel trouble, and families like Mr. O. F. Wisher's of Sycamore, Ill., and Mrs. Carrie Culler's of 325 N. State Street, South Bend, Ind., are now never without it in the house. They have tested it and know its grand value to every member of the family.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For other request the doctor's address is Dr. W. R. Caldwell, 1,500 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

Nor smokes nor swears nor flirts
And shuns all sinful snares—

At morning, noon and night—
He's dead.

We saw in the Press some time ago, something about the dog tax and what had been paid out for the sheep that had been killed, supposed by the dogs. Now we are in favor of the dog tax but the poorest people in the county pay this tax and get no benefit of it. Now let's get this tax changed and put it on the road, where the poor people will get some benefit of it and we will have better roads. The man that owns the sheep is able to lose the sheep as any other stock. If a dog kills our hogs we get nothing for them, so let's change it, the road needs it.
